

Pointillism is an effect whereby lots of small dots of different paints or inks are placed very closely together. At a distance, these dots would have the effect of looking like a solid shade.

The technique was mainly developed by Georges Seurat, and his most famous pointillism painting is Sunday Afternoon on the Island of La Grande Jatte (1886).

When is the last time you have seen pointillism in action?

