Andy's aunt
had lived
all her adult life in Los Angeles.

She had lost touch with Andy's mother, her sister, for over 25 years. Then she suddenly wrote to say she was coming back for a visit. Andy's mother gave him the flight number and asked him to pick up his aunt from the airport. "But how will I recognize her, I've never even seen a photograph!" he objected. "And she's never seen a photograph of you," added his mother cheerfully. "But don't worry, you won't miss her." And he didn't, but how?
