

Ali Asgary received $7000 for year 2011-2012 from the York University Academic Innovation Fund to develop "Business Continuity Planning Toolkit for Canadian Small Businesses". The aim of this project is to enhance the Canadian small business's capacity to create their own business continuity plan to be able to better manage their large risks and emergencies. It involves a number of SAS faculty, students, alumni and practitioners both in the development phase of the toolkit and its implementation and use. The toolkit will be a web based application supported by regular in campus training workshops and onsite delivery. MADEM students and alumni who are interested to be involved in this project can contact Ali Asgary at: asgary@yorku.ca. For more information about the project, please visit: <http://aifprojects.yorku.ca/projects/yu-bcpt/>