The Politics of Citizenship and Migration series publishes exciting new research in all areas of migration and citizenship studies. Open to multiple approaches, the series considers normative, conceptual, comparative, empirical, historical, methodological, and theoretical works. Versatile, the series publishes single and multi-authored monographs, short-form Pivot books, and edited volumes. Broad in its coverage, the series promotes research on citizenship and migration laws and policies, voluntary and forced migration, rights and obligations, demographic change, diasporas, political membership or behavior, public policy, minorities, transformations in sovereignty and political community, border and security studies, statelessness, naturalization, integration and citizen-making, and subnational, supranational, global, corporate, or multilevel citizenship.

ABOUT THE EDITORS

Willem Maas (PhD, Yale) is Jean Monnet Chair and Associate Professor of Political Science, Public & International Affairs, Social & Political Thought, and Socio-Legal Studies at Glendon College, York University, Canada.

Justin Gest (PhD, LSE) is Assistant Professor of Public Policy at George Mason University’s School of Policy, Government and International Affairs, USA, and Co-founder and Deputy Director of the Migration Studies Unit at the London School of Economics, UK.

ADVISORY BOARD

Matt Barreto (UCLA)  Terri Givens (Menlo)
Seyla Benhabib (Yale)  Michael Jones-Correa (Cornell)
Irene Bloemraad (Berkeley)  Susan Martin (Georgetown)
Anna Boucher (Sydney)  Jeannette Money (UC Davis)
Megan Bradley (McGill)  Ayelet Shachar (Toronto)
Brian Burgoon (Amsterdam)  Oxana Shevel (Tufts)
Erin Aaran Chung (Johns Hopkins)  Maarten Vink (Maastricht)
Elizabeth Cohen (Syracuse)  Min Zhou (UCLA)
David Cook-Martin (Grinnell)

If you would like to submit a proposal, please contact:
Willem Maas (Series Editor): maas@yorku.ca
Justin Gest (Series Editor): jgest@gmu.edu
Anca Pusca (Palgrave Macmillan Editor): anca.pusca@palgrave-usa.com