

The Human Rights, Participatory Growth and Poverty Eradication Program of McLaughlin College Cordially Invites You to:

A Roundtable Discussion On:

How the Private Sector Can Play a Practical Role in Creating Access to Clean Water?

January 26, 2010

Location:: Junior Common Room 014, McLaughlin College, York University

2:30-3:00 p.m. Introductions and Presentations by Panelists

3:00-4:30 p.m. Discussion and Conclusions

The roundtable discussion will have panelists presenting from the NGO sector on how the private sector can have a role in creating and implementing projects made to maintain and improve sources for clean drinking water, improved sanitation facilities and hygiene education.

The mission of the "Human Rights, Participatory Growth and Poverty Eradication Program" is to further the UN Millennium Development Goals by adopting an approach espousing equality of opportunity and access. Our goal in accomplishing this is to provide practical solutions -in collaboration with stakeholders-to remove poverty by concentrating on the areas of Health, Housing, Education, Water, Sanitation and Hygiene, which are major components of poverty. You can share your ideas and skills by being part of the team to help end poverty.

This roundtable discussion is one in a series of roundtable discussions that The Human Rights Participatory Growth and Poverty Eradication Program will be hosting for the purpose of making poverty eradication a collective act through creating awareness about issues of global poverty and the roles that the corporate sector can play in addressing these issues. We invite you to come and bring your ideas, opinions, and suggestions as you join our panel for a discussion in this great debate.
