

The Human Rights, Participatory Growth and Poverty Eradication Program of McLaughlin College Cordially Invites You to:

Roundtable Discussion On:
How the Private Sector can Play a Practical Role in Cooperation with the Government, NGOs, Academics, and Civil Society in Providing Affordable Adequate Housing?

Tuesday February 23, 2010

5:00-7:00pm

Location: Junior Common Room 014, McLaughlin College,
York University

Attending Panelists:

- Neil Hetherington CEO of Habitat for Humanity
- Nick Volk Secretary/Treasurer of Rooftops Canada
- Representative from Wellesley Institute
- Professor Uzo Anucha from the School of Social Work, York University

This roundtable discussion will be complimented by a panelist of experts in the area of housing; presenting issues, strategies, and solutions to how the private sector can have a role in creating and implementing projects to provide affordable adequate housing to all both domestically and internationally.

The mission of the "Human Rights, Participatory Growth and Poverty Eradication Program" is to enforce the "UN Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights" by providing practical solutions -in collaboration with stakeholders-to remove poverty by concentrating on the areas of Health, Housing, Education, Water and Sanitation, which are major components of poverty. You can share your ideas and skills by being part of the team to help end poverty.

This roundtable discussion is one in a series of roundtable discussions that The Human Rights Participatory Growth and Poverty Eradication Program will be hosting for the purpose of making poverty eradication a collective act through creating awareness about issues of global poverty and the roles that the corporate sector can play in addressing these issues. We invite you to come and bring your ideas, opinions, and suggestions as you join our panel for a discussion in this great debate.
