

My letter which opened our 2003-04 Report indicated that I was stepping down after more than fifteen years as director of the York Centre for International and Security Studies (YCISS). I will not repeat what I stated at that time. Suffice to note that the importance of the SDF program to our work has not in any way diminished. Unanticipated events led me to remain as director during this academic year and likely for the next year. I am therefore most heartened that York University's Office of the Vice-President Research & Innovation, along with the Office of the Dean of Arts, have renewed their confidence in the Centre and their commitment to its pursuit of excellence. In this regard, I expect soon the University will announce a number of new faculty positions in areas directly relevant to the YCISS mandate. I also am pleased to report that York continues to receive an exceptional number of outstanding applicants to various M.A. and Ph.D programs who indicate that a primary reason for their wishing to attend York is the reputation of and the opportunities afforded by our Centre.

This letter is organized around the three topics requested by SDF in the call for annual reports.

Highlights of the 2004-05 Academic Year

Following our overall program plan and mandate, we have focussed on sustaining a high level of research, ensuring a consistent flow of publications and related information, organizing public events both on campus and in outreach to the larger community, and maintaining a series of strong connections with public institutions to ensure a place in policy-relevant research and consultations. We have done all these things through a mix of Centre-sponsored activities and facilitating the work of our faculty and graduate students.

Highlights include:

- co-organizing the Inter-University Seminar on Armed Forces and Society (IUS) conference for the Canadian chapter of the Armed Forces and Society;
- convening the 12th Annual YCISS Conference while also publishing as a book the results of the previous conference;
- organizing a workshop in Ottawa on the challenges of post-conflict policing;
- convening an authors' workshop for the planned volume, Securing Canada in an Uncertain World;
- organizing an SDF-Net symposium and planning a second;
- organizing consultative meetings for DFAIT/FAC on various aspects of Asia-Pacific security;
- continuing our project on the Stability Pact funded by the Norwegian Ministry of Foreign Affairs;
- working with three internationally renowned ecologists in the convening of a consultative symposium on Invasive Non-Indigenous Species as a foundational security challenge nationally, continentally, and globally;
- providing consultative services to FAC related to opportunities for track two dialogues on peace and security in the Middle East;
- working with the UN University, the Elliott School of International Affairs, and the Finnish Academy of Sciences on a project proposal for training women leaders in east, south, and west Asia on peace, security, and conflict management;
- convening a symposium for researchers, NGOs, and local government on the challenges of and responses to Food Security;
- holding a joint meeting of our Post-Communist Studies Programme with members of Pugwash Canada;
- organizing a multilateral meeting with Canadians, Americans, Israelis, and Palestinians on environmental issues as sources of both conflict and potential cooperation between Israelis, Palestinians, and authorities in the contiguous territories and countries (conference proceedings just released as an edited volume); and,
- the continuation of our public outreach initiative with an event held at Toronto City Hall.

YCISS and the SDF Program

Over the years that there has been a strong and constructive partnership between YCISS and the SDF (and its predecessor, the MSSP), we have consistently argued that the SDF has contributed so remarkably to scholarship and teaching due to it being structured not around a narrow project but rather in support of program development and delivery. Unlike most other funding sources that are project specific, the SDF provides discretionary support, thereby allowing us to leverage a modest but longer-term and sustained financial capability into a myriad of projects and activities. It does this by underwriting the core structure and process of the Centre. Being a recipient of an SDF award means that the unit can take intellectual as well as project risks. The SDF funding provides the capacity to build upon the basic infrastructure provided by the University and thus to enable the core faculty and staff to undertake a broad and complex range of activities, including the flexibility to compete for external awards, grants, and contracts.

Therefore, to speculate about the impact of the termination of SDF funding is both simple and daunting. The very success of the SDF in support of its original mandate (then as the MSSP) to facilitate the creation of competencies in international defence, strategic, and more recently also security studies across Canadian universities has stimulated greater demand but unfortunately without any concomitant increase in resources from within Canada. In other words, today we are actually more dependent on SDF because the demands and expectations are greater yet there is only a marginal increase in the availability of other funds to support such work, and virtually none that is discretionary rather than tied to a particular project. Hence, for YCISS the termination of the SDF fund likely would lead to the demise of the Centre. As our Report indicates, while York University over the years has appreciably increased its contribution (in space, in teaching release, in infrastructure support) to YCISS in an effort to recognize and, in some ways, match the SDF contribution, without the SDF funds we would not be able: to sustain our professional staff which make possible the many grants, awards, and contracts we receive; to maintain the quality of the R.B. Byers Memorial Library research library holdings nor staff it so that it is open and available to both the York University and wider public communities; to offer M.A. and Ph.D entry scholarships or Ph.D dissertation support; to continue our specialized Post-Communist Studies Programme and library collection; to convene the range of special lectures and seminars, or possibly ensure the quality of the YCISS Annual Conference which, while drawing on other support, is based on the foundation provided by the SDF award.

The end of the SDF program also would undermine the very visibility of Canadian and international security and defence studies in Canada for which it was initially intended. To put this into sharper relief, over the past fifteen years departments of history and political science in Canada have turned their attention, especially in faculty hiring which is usually an outcome of undergraduate curriculum planning, to areas other than defence and security. While academic preferences are cyclical phenomena, the presence of the SDF community ensures that there is a foundation of research and teaching competencies which are somewhat more resilient to the vicissitudes of intellectual interests which may not always correspond neatly to the vagaries of international affairs. The SDF program also offers a continuing and sustainable network of scholars, from the most junior to retirees, able to share and to extend knowledge. Moreover, it provides an address that connects scholarship with the defence and security policy community in Canada.

Anticipated Priorities, 2005-06

While maintaining our profile through continued commitments to consultative projects, to public seminars and lectures both at the York campus and as part of our outreach program in various locales in the Greater Toronto Area, to supporting research of both our faculty and graduate students, and in cooperating with various units and organizations both at York and located elsewhere in Canada and beyond, we have a number of initiatives to which we will be turning particular attention. Since publications are a fundamental aspect of scholarship and project deliverables, in addition to the release of the proceedings of the 12th Annual YCISS Conference, we will be concentrating on the relocation of the editorial offices of the prestigious International Feminist Journal of Politics to the Centre (senior co-editor serving as YCISS' deputy director) and finalizing arrangements for the establishment of a new journal tentatively titled Critical Security Studies, to be made available in both hard copy and in an internet version. If the contractual arrangements are finalized within the next few months, we anticipate spending the coming year preparing the inaugural issue and developing a portfolio of submissions for the newly created international editorial board to address. This journal will be managed cooperatively with colleagues in Great Britain. Having both journals edited at YCISS also should stimulate new research and related activities by faculty, graduate students, and visiting scholars.

We anticipate great success with our newly established SDF-Net partnership with McMaster University, and hope to turn this into a more effective instrument of outreach to faculty and graduate students in southern Ontario, with a focus on issues relevant to research and policy in the complementary areas of defence, strategic, and security studies. We also anticipate pursuing the creation of a trans-disciplinary cross-Canada network of scientists and social scientists concerned with the challenges posed by invasive non-indigenous species, to date estimated to cost the Canadian economy as much as $30 billion annually. Collaboration with environmental experts and those in the sciences, social sciences, and law on food security may also proceed. A new area which we are only now exploring is space securitization and related science and policy issues. YCISS is working with York University's internationally renowned Centre for Research on Earth and Space Sciences (CRESS), and this may evolve into an interdisciplinary project proposal.

In Conclusion

In 2006 YCISS will be celebrating its 20th anniversary as a research centre. What began in 1982-83 as a very modest research program organized around the interests of a few faculty has expanded into a substantial research institution involving many faculty from across the university and beyond, often in collaboration with other institutions elsewhere in Canada and globally. Support by the then DND's Military and Strategic Studies Program and more recently the Security and Defence Forum has been fundamental to our growth and development. Just as the world has undergone remarkable transformation over these two decades, so too has the study of peace and security. We are proud to note that the activities of the members of our Centre – faculty, students, visitors, and staff – reflect these new challenges, and we are pleased to acknowledge that the MSSP/SDF program has been an integral part of making this happen. What at one time may seem central to issues of defence, peace, and security can quickly become marginal; and what was once outside the purview of defence and security studies can just as suddenly emerge as significant if not central. The brilliance of the SDF program has been twofold: to provide discretionary rather than project-specific support and to ensure and indeed protect the intellectual space so necessary for the research community to thrive. For this we are most grateful.

Yet again as director of YCISS, it is my pleasure to provide DND-SDF with our annual report and to recognize the importance of SDF financial and intellectual support for our mandate and our work.

Sincerely yours,

David B. Dewitt, Director
Professor of Political Science

Section 1 - Mission Statement

1.1	What is the Centre's mission statement?
	The York University Centre for International and Security Studies is guided by an underlying philosophy that encourages theoretically-informed empirical research in international and security studies. The Centre pursues a triple mandate of teaching, research, and outreach with an explicit interest in facilitating critical thinking among scholars and between researchers and the policy community.
1.2	What is the relationship between the mission statement and the activities of the SDF centre?
	In order to implement this mandate, YCISS organizes regular and special seminars and conferences, undertakes and facilitates collaborative research within Canada and abroad, serves as the secretariat for professional academic organizations, and provides opportunities for the publication of research findings.

1.3	How do the activities you've undertaken in the current fiscal year match what you undertook to do in your funding proposal?
	In our funding proposal, YCISS offered a mix of continuing commitments and new projects, also recognizing that unanticipated opportunities as well as constraints would lead to some revisions in the year's program. Overall, however, we have been able to maintain the strategic format, which involves a mix of internally generated research, publications, seminars, and lectures along with external outreach, all buttressed by a variety of externally funded research projects, consultations, symposia, and partnerships. We have been able to continue our productive relationship with international security and defence interests in Ottawa. These have included completing a Foreign Affairs Canada ISROP funded national survey of courses and, as ancillary to that, research on WMD underway at Canadian universities, as well as a volume on space security for FAC and The Eisenhower Institute. We also have been able to renew an internet-based data collection and survey project on the Stability Pact funded by the Norwegian Ministry of Foreign Affairs. As noted in last year's report, in cooperation with the Canadian Forces College and the Canadian branch of the Armed Forces and Society journal, in October 2004 we co-hosted the annual IUS Canada Conference for which we served as principal organizer. We also continued developing our innovative SDF-Net program, initially with our SDF colleagues from Wilfred Laurier University and more recently spreading beyond SDF centres to collaborate with McMaster University on a forthcoming SDF-Net one-day symposium. This revised approach will allow us to reach beyond the established SDF community. Following our stated commitment, we secured funding in support of an authors' workshop as an interim step to developing an entirely new and original book on Canada and international security and defence. Meant to be a successor to the previously published but out of print volume, Canada's International Security Policy, this volume is designed to be used as the core text in upper division and graduate courses. Focussing on both post-Cold War and post-9/11 environments, we have been able to secure a full complement of authors drawn from across the Canadian academic community and are now in the midst of negotiating with a likely publisher.

While our work on an intensive short course to be offered during late spring or early summer to graduate students, faculty, and non-university experts has been suspended, we have moved forward with our proposed journal on Critical Security Studies. We now are in the final stages of concluding a contract with a major international publishing house specializing in high quality journals, and anticipate this to be completed in the very near future. As a complement to this, a senior faculty member at YCISS has secured the editorship of the International Feminist Journal of Politics, one of the more prestigious academic journals in political science.

As the text of our report indicates, we have fulfilled our intent to publish the proceedings of the 2003-04 Eleventh Annual YCISS Conference, Governance and Global (Dis)Orders: Trends, Transformations, and Impasses while we also have held a wonderfully successful Twelfth Annual YCISS Conference on “The Ethics of Building Peace in International Relations.” Although the possibility for a public event on ballistic missile defence to have been co-sponsored with the SDF programs at Dalhousie University and Carleton University did not occur, we continued with our own public outreach activities. These included a major public lecture held in the Council Chambers of the City of Toronto and an upcoming public panel discussion with a principal author, a leading journalist, and a scholar on the government’s International Policy Review/Statement. The latter event had been scheduled for the 2004-05 fiscal year, but has been postponed due to the government’s delay in releasing the statement.

Within our report will be found more details on our regular seminar series, our visiting scholars program, our support for undergraduate student activities (e.g., funding to attend the model NATO and/or UN) and graduate student research as well as conference participation, all projected in last year’s report and successfully undertaken during this academic year. This also includes our continuing to serve as the intellectual home and funder for the Post-Communist Studies Programme, the Distinguished Critical Thinkers in World Politics seminar series, and our Working Papers publications program.

It also should be noted that, as anticipated, YCISS continued to fulfil its mandate as a partner with the Liu Institute for Global Issues at UBC in support of the Canadian Consortium for Human Security (CCHS) and the Canadian Council for Asia Pacific Security (CANCAPS). We also continued to provide expert input into a number of consultative programs with various departments in the federal government, including the Non-Proliferation, Arms Control, and Disarmament consultative group, CANCAPS, and the Canadian Member Committee for the international Council for Security Cooperation in the Asia Pacific (CSCAP), the latter two connecting with both FAC and CIDA on security-related matters.

1.4	What activities are planned for next year? How do they match what you undertook to do in your funding proposal?
	Continuing with our efforts to have a balance between research, teaching, academic events, and outreach, YCISS intends to ensure that our faculty and researchers have the support necessary to undertake their work, that our graduate students at both the M.A. and Ph.D levels have access to sufficient intellectual and financial support that they progress successfully towards the completion of their programs and their professional goals, and that with the support of the SDF program York University is able to contribute to an enhanced understanding of Canadian defence, security, and foreign policies. This we aim to do through our seminars, publications, and public outreach activities, in coordination with the day-to-day operation of the Centre. All this has been further enhanced by the SDF's creation of the international conference fund initiative. This significant contribution of an envelope of financial support to junior scholars has greatly facilitated our ability to ensure that the most promising advanced doctoral students have the opportunity to present their work to international audiences for validation and critique. YCISS has chosen, due to the size and quality of our graduate students and the availability of alternative sources of funding to faculty, to concentrate our use of these funds to the support of Ph.D students who would be presenting parts of their dissertation research at international conferences. In only two years, this innovative approach to the support of the next generation of scholars already has borne fruit. In addition to the individual research activities of our resident and affiliated faculty and graduate students, YCISS is moving forward with the new volume on Canada's international security policy, tentatively titled Securing Canada in an Uncertain World: Perspectives, Policy, and Practice. The confirmed contributing authors include many from the SDF community, including established faculty and newly completed Ph.Ds. We are in final negotiations to establish a new international journal, both internet and hard-copy, to be published out of the United Kingdom. Critical Security Studies will cover international security and defence concerns from a more explicitly critical theory perspective than often is found in existing journals and should offer an enhanced visibility to a new and emerging generation of scholars engaged in security and defence studies.

Our commitment to support a broad range of intellectual undertakings reflecting the pluralism that is so vital to a healthy and independent research and teaching environment will, as of 1 July 2005, be substantiated when YCISS becomes home to the prestigious scholarly journal, International Feminist Journal of Politics. This will be co-edited by a senior colleague at YCISS who brings her own widely recognized expertise as a leading scholar in international relations, security studies, and feminist theory. She will also be providing opportunities for graduate students to learn the art of managing and editing a professional publication.

We have entered into an informal agreement with colleagues at McMaster University to co-sponsor two SDF-Net symposia during the 2005-06 academic year. These will provide the opportunity to encourage both faculty and graduate students from universities throughout southern Ontario to explore issues of common concern related directly to international security and Canadian defence concerns. Partnering with a non-SDF university also will contribute to widening the impact of the SDF program.

Following our longstanding commitment to work with colleagues in various parts of the Canadian government, we anticipate continuing our involvement in research projects, consultative meetings, and on occasion, track two activities, with DND, FAC, CIDA, and Environment Canada. Topics currently underway or in the planning stages include Canada-Japan security cooperation, regional security in the Middle East, nuclear non-proliferation, public diplomacy, strategic culture, human security, food security, and the security implications of non-indigenous invasive species. These projects usually also involve drawing in scholars from other universities cutting across a range of disciplines and, as one can appreciate, at times moving us into “non-traditional” areas of security and defence. We also can expect that one or more of the research projects currently being pursued by our doctoral students (see the list in this report) will spin off into a project embraced by others at the Centre and supported through external funds. Indeed, it is the synergy between the established work of the faculty and Centre staff and the emerging work of our graduate students that can evolve into the most productive and innovative projects adopted by the Centre.

A side benefit of these ongoing and newly developing areas of activity is that YCISS continues to attract visiting scholars, including established faculty (this past year we hosted a Fulbright scholar on cybersecurity and a Japanese scholar on civil society and security), postdoctoral researchers (recently one with a Human Security Fellowship), and foreign graduate students undertaking their dissertation research in Canada. This pattern is likely to be repeated as we have been asked to sponsor applications from various researchers for the coming year. Further, we continue to respond positively to requests by Canadian and foreign students to serve as project interns at the Centre, often during one term or over the summer months.

As one might expect, some projects have been completed while others are less far along, with the deliverables – articles, chapters, books – forthcoming. Nevertheless, the ongoing effort of something yet to be completed may be much more significant than regularly publishing a journal article that does not represent the accumulative impact of longer term research. One example is with a long-time Centre colleague who has been pursuing parallel projects that have spanned two funding cycles, have yet to be fully reported due to not being complete, but where now the two books are both in press and thus should be recorded in next year’s report. Moreover, this same scholar has spent considerable time, energy, and intellectual capital on developing an academic program, externally funded, for a national Chair and research program in Brazilian Studies partially linked with a project on hemispheric security, that will involve a Mexican partner. This is in recognition of the emergence of Brazil as the regional political, economic, and security and defence power in Latin America and thus a principal actor in hemispheric security, political, and economic matters, a factor of growing importance to Canada. Yet as important as this effort is, it is not easily counted as a “deliverable” in the normal sense of the term as implied in this report. But clearly this work conforms to the spirit, intent, and commitment of the mandate confirmed on us by the SDF award.

Section 2 - Performance Indicators

Goal #1: Satisfactory capacity of Canadian academic community to contribute to the public policy debates and public education on defence and security issues

Academic research population (i.e. core group affiliated with the Centre/Chair) focused on security and defence issues with SDF centres

2.1	What is the number of faculty involved in research?	Last year's total
	8 resident faculty This is the number of faculty members resident at YCISS. Of these eight faculty members, three were on extended leave over the course of the year. Only the activities of resident Centre faculty not on extended leave are included in this report. 10 affiliated faculty In addition to resident faculty, YCISS has numerous affiliated faculty who are actively involved in Centre activities. Activities of affiliated faculty are not included in this report.	8 resident faculty 9 affiliated faculty
Resident Faculty
	Amitav Acharya, B.A. (Utkal), M.A. (Jawaharlal Nehru), Ph.D (Murdoch), Professor of Political Science, Faculty of Arts (on extended leave). Research Interests: Third world security; regional security (Asia Pacific, Southeast Asia); ASEAN; regional multilateral institutions.

	Nergis Canefe , B.A. (Bogazici University, Turkey), M.A. (SUNY Binghamton, USA), Ph.D (York), Assistant Professor of Political Science, Faculty of Arts. Research Interests: Applied political philosophy in the areas of citizenship; diasporic identities; forced migration; democratic governance; group rights and conflict resolution. Regional Focus: Southeast Europe and the Middle East.
	David B. Dewitt , B.A. (British Columbia), M.A., Ph.D (Stanford), Director; Professor of Political Science, Faculty of Arts. Research Interests: International relations; regional security; strategic studies; conflict management; Asia Pacific; Middle East; Canadian foreign, defence, and security policy.
	Edgar J. Dosman , B.A. (Saskatchewan), M.A. (Oxford), Ph.D (Harvard), Professor of Political Science, Faculty of Arts. Research Interests: Canadian foreign and defence policy; regional conflict and conflict resolution (Central America and the Caribbean, Southern Africa); Arctic studies.
	David Leyton-Brown , B.A. (McGill), A.M., Ph.D (Harvard), Professor of Political Science, Faculty of Arts (on administrative leave); Executive Director, Ontario Council on Graduate Studies. Research Interests: Canadian-American economic and defence relations; Canadian foreign policy; international peacekeeping; international political economy.
	David Mutimer , B.A. (Western), M.A., Ph.D (York), Associate Professor of Political Science, Faculty of Arts (on leave). Research Interests: International relations; critical security studies; non-proliferation; European security.
	Sergei Plekhanov , Diploma (Moscow), Ph.D (Institute for the Study of the USA and Canada), Associate Professor of Political Science, Faculty of Arts; Coordinator, Post-Communist Studies Programme (PCSP). Research Interests: Russian foreign policy; Russia/Soviet Union-American relations; European security; post-communist transition studies.
	Sandra Whitworth , B.A. (York), M.A., Ph.D (Carleton), Deputy Director; Associate Professor of Political Science and Women's Studies, Faculty of Arts; Coordinator, Graduate Diploma in Security Studies. Research Interests: Gender and international relations; international institutions; peacekeeping (Cambodia).
Affiliated Faculty
	Howard Adelman , B.A., M.A., Ph.D (Toronto), Professor of Philosophy, Faculty of Arts (Retired); Founding Director, Centre for Refugee Studies (1988-1993). Research Interests: Early warning; conflict management; Canadian refugee policy (domestic and overseas).

	Ann Denholm Crosby , B.A. (British Columbia), M.A. (McGill), M.A., Ph.D (McMaster), Graduate Program Director, Political Science; Associate Professor of Political Science, Faculty of Arts. Research Interests: Canadian foreign and defence policy; NORAD; peace research; international security studies.
	Wenona Giles , B.A. (Santa Clara), Teaching Degree (British Columbia), M.A., Ph.D (Toronto), Associate Professor, Chair, School of Social Sciences, Atkinson Faculty of Liberal and Professional Studies. Research Interests: Gender relations of political and economic migration; gender, ethnicity, and nationalism in conflict/militarized zones.
	Susan Henders , B.A. (Saskatchewan), B. Journalism (Carleton), M. Phil (Chinese University of Hong Kong), D. Phil (Oxford), Assistant Professor of Political Science, Faculty of Arts. Research Interests: Democratization and identity in East and South-East Asia; the politics of autonomy and minorities in Asia and Europe; the international relations of East Asia.
	Peter Penz , B.A., M.A. (British Columbia), D. Phil (Oxford), Director, Centre for Refugee Studies; Associate Professor, Faculty of Environmental Studies. Research Interests: Environmental policy; development and displacement; refugees; social justice.
	Craig Scott , B.A. (McGill), B.A. (Jurisprudence) (Oxford), LL.M. (University of London), LL.B. (Dalhousie), Associate Professor and Associate Dean (Research and Graduate Studies), Osgoode Hall Law School. Research Interests: International public law; human rights; the United Nations; international relations; social theory.
	David Shugarman , B.A. (Alberta), M.A., Ph.D (Toronto), Director, Centre for Practical Ethics; Professor of Political Science, Faculty of Arts. Research Interests: Canadian politics; ethics and public policy; federalism; international affairs.
	Orest Subtelny , B.A., M.A. (North Carolina), Ph.D (Harvard), Professor of History, Faculty of Arts. Research Interests: Growth of the Russian empire; Soviet nationality problems; modern Ukrainian history.
	Stephen Weiss , B.A. (Lafayette College), M.A., Ph.D (University of Pennsylvania), Associate Professor of Policy and International Business, Schulich School of Business. Research Interests: International negotiations (business, diplomatic); strategic alliances; communications in conflict; conflict management.
	Bernard Wolf , B.A. (City University of New York), M.A., Ph.D (Yale), Professor of Economics and International Business, Administrative Studies. Research Interests: International economics; international business; international organization.

2.2	What is the number of centre staff involved in research?	Last year's number
	4 This is the number of full-time staff employed by YCISS to support, administer, and manage the Centre's projects and activities. Only two of these positions are partially supported by the SDF grant.	5
	Administrative Officer: Joan Broussard, B.B.A. (St. Francis Xavier), LL.B. (Osgoode)
	Conference and Information Coordinator: Sarah Whitaker, B.A. (York)
	Secretary-Receptionist: Lori Milczarski
	Project Manager for the Foreign Policy and Trade Analysts Professional Development Project: Bohdan Myndiuk, B.Com. (Toronto).
2.3	What is the number of graduate students involved in research?	Last year's number
	19 This is the number of graduate students designated YCISS researchers. These are students who make a commitment to involvement in Centre activities and projects and who, for the most part, are resident at the Centre. This report reflects the activities of only these researchers and does not reflect the number of graduate students involved in Centre activities more generally.	18
	Véronique Aubry, B.A. (Sherbrooke), M.A. (Ottawa). Research Interests: International relations theories (post-positivist and critical approaches); post-structuralist, critical, and feminist approaches to security studies; discourses and practices of the securitization of immigration within the institutions of the European Union. She currently holds an Ontario Graduate Scholarship (OGS).

	Colleen Bell, B.A. (Calgary), M.A. (York). Research Interests: Post-structuralist, critical and feminist approaches to security studies; discourses of securitization, repression and governmentalization of political dissent and protest; sovereignty, identity and productions of liberal subjectivity.
	Ryerson Christie, B.A., M.A. (Carleton). Research Interests: Securitization of identity and peacebuilding. His research has focused on the securitization of identity and its role in peacebuilding, and has a strong regional focus on southeast Asia, looking at Cambodia in particular. In addition to this research his work has addressed broader issues of Canadian security and defence policies, with particular focus on naval issues and the role of human security in Canada's military. He currently holds a Canadian Consortium on Human Security (CCHS) Ph.D fellowship, and has been a past recipient of the Security and Defence Forum Ph.D scholarship.
	Elizabeth Dauphinée, B.A., M.A. (York). Research Interests: Levinasian ethics; representation; responsibility; biopolitics and recognition; sovereignty; theology; theodicy; eschatology. Her dissertation project explores the imperative to responsibility in the context of genocide and war crimes and the implications of finding oneself in the Levinasian face-to-face with the genocidaire. Her future research plans include an exploration of the relationship between ethics and biopolitics and an examination of the ways in which bodies coded as threatening are excised from the realm of those to whom the juridical and moral institutions of liberal societies find themselves responsible.
	Cheshmak Farhoumand-Sims, B.A. (Toronto), M.Sc. (George Mason). Research Interests: Women, war and peace; gender and international relations; post-conflict peacebuilding and reconstruction; human rights; humanitarian intervention; global governance. Teaching areas include: Peace and Conflict Studies; Canadian Foreign Policy; International Relations; Security Studies. Her dissertation focuses on how religion and culture are used to prevent women from full participation as partners in peace and the consequence of this absence in the planning and implementation of long term sustainable peace. Her case study is Afghanistan where she worked in the summer of 2003. She is also working with Rights and Democracy and Women Living Under Muslim Laws preparing human rights training material for Afghan women. Cheshmak is also a doctoral dissertation fellow with the Canadian Consortium on Human Security.
	Elizabeth Guerrier, B.A. (Trent), M.A. (Western). Research Interests: History of anthropological theory and practice in the context of conflict and war, with particular attention to turn of the century research on Native Americans and World War II research in Japanese American internment camps. Other research interests include: Canadian Aboriginal-State relations; Aboriginal law; critical legal theory; deconstruction.

	Levent Hekimoglu, M.A. (York). Research Interests: Environmental/human security and international/global political economy, with a focus on maritime trade; international regime of the sea; coastal environmental/human security issues. His current work is on the Black Sea basin and the Turkish Straits. Previous research looked at political, economic, and environmental aspects of post-communist transitions in Central Eurasia, especially issues related to hydrocarbons.
	Alison Howell, B.A. (Trent), M.A. (Carleton). Research Interests: Post-structuralist and feminist approaches to security studies and Canadian foreign policy; liberal regimes of 'peace'; discourses of 'Canadian values'; the deployment of psychiatric expertise in zones of conflict and the problematization of the attitudes, behaviours and psyches of those deemed to be engaging in civil conflict. She currently holds a Social Sciences & Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) doctoral fellowship.
	Abhinava Kumar, B.A. (York). Research Interests: Critical security studies; popular culture and the institution of war; military/technology/culture/politics nexus; South Asia, particularly issues around the construction of Hindu nationalism; intersections of identity and security. He is the recipient of the 2003-2004 John Gellner Graduate Scholarship.
	Marc Lafleur, B.A. (McGill), M.A. (York). Research Interests: Ways in which the Cold War is being memorialized through monuments and museums in the United States. He is interested in how these sites work into a reading of American power and sovereignty and as well as into how they contribute to a militarization of everyday life.
	Tina Managhan, B.A. (Guelph), M.A. (Waterloo). Research Interests: Critical security studies; governmentality; post-identity politics and resistance. Her dissertation is investigating the role that women's maternal identities play in processes of militarization and constructions of domestic/global peace.
	Isabelle Masson, B.A., M.A. (UQAM). Research Interests: International relations theories (post-positivist and critical approaches); critical security studies; the transformation process of post-Apartheid South Africa; gender, nationalism and transition in the former-Yugoslavia; national identities; state formation/transformation and transition to neoliberalism. She currently holds a Social Sciences & Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) doctoral fellowship award and is the recipient of the 2003-2004 George G. Bell Doctoral Scholarship sponsored by YCISS.

	Cristina Masters, B.A., M.A. (York). Research Interests: Militarism; cyborgs; missile defence; security; masculinity; ethics. She is a recipient of a Social Sciences & Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) award, and was also awarded the Verney Book Prize for the best major research paper of the class of 2000. Her dissertation title is: “Militarism and Its Others: Reading at the Margins of International Politics.”
	Ritu Mathur, B.A. (University of Calcutta), M.A., M.Phil (Jawaharlal Nehru University, India). Research Interests: Use of traditional and non-traditional approaches to security, international humanitarian law, and applied ethics. She is interested in the politics of missile defence in East Asia and the role of nuclear deterrence in South Asia. Her present focus is on the role of the International Non-Governmental Organizations, especially the International Committee of the Red Cross, in constituting multilateral security regimes against landmines, small arms, and child soldiers. She is a recipient of the 2004-2005 George G. Bell Doctoral Scholarship sponsored by YCISS.
	Augustine Park, B.A. (UBC), M.A. (York). Research Interests: Child soldiers; post-conflict reconciliation; restorative justice. She is interested in how gendered conceptions of childhood inform international legal discourse and local reintegrative practices in DDR for former child soldiers. Her other research includes studies on self-government and Aboriginal restorative justice. She currently holds a Social Sciences & Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) doctoral fellowship award. Augustine will be a resident at the Onati International Institute for the Sociology of Law in Onati, Spain from January to March 2005.
	Melanie Richter-Montpetit, B.A. (Free University Berlin, Germany), M.A. (York). Research Interests: Gender, class and identity: rethinking war, peace and security in Africa. She works on the development of a theoretical framework that draws on the historical materialism of Marxist scholarship as well as postmodern and postcolonial epistemologies. Her work has a regional focus on Sub-Sahara Africa, in particular Somalia/Somaliland; shadow-globalization; merging of security and development; “traditional” peacebuilding. She currently holds a George G. Bell Doctoral Scholarship sponsored by YCISS as well as a York Entrance scholarship. She has been a past recipient of a DAAD (German Academic Exchange Service) scholarship.
	Carmen Sanchez, B.A. (Laval). Research Interests: Critical security studies; conflict and post-conflict reconstruction in Afghanistan; Soviet and Russian politics. She is interested in how pop culture helps to circulate and construct specific myths (understandings) related to IR theory and historical events.

	Zubairu Wai , B.A. Hons. (University of Sierra Leone), M.A. (International University of Japan). Research Interests: Regional security and security regionalism in West Africa (ECOWAS, ECOMOG, and the dynamics of conflicts and conflict management in West Africa); traditional and indigenous responses to conflict and methods of conflict management; application of critical approaches to understanding conflicts in West Africa; globalisation, neo-imperialism, and the incorporation of security in discourses of development in the Global south.
	Lisa Williams , B.A. (Toronto), M.A. (York). Research Interests: Canadian Foreign and Defence Policy; human security; conflict management and post-conflict peace building; regional security and Southeast Asia.
2.4	What is the number of research associates involved in research?	Last year's number
	7 This is the number of research associates resident at YCISS. Only the activities of resident Centre research associates are included in this report.	8
	Samantha Arnold , B.A. (Wilfrid Laurier), M.A., Ph.D (York). Research Interests: International relations theory (post-structural); critical security studies; language and identity; the politics of representation. Teaching areas: International relations; theory and practice of international security; global conflict and security; Canadian security and defence policy; Canadian foreign policy; comparative foreign policy. She is currently researching in two areas; the first explores religious discourses in American foreign policy, and the second examines the tension between military culture and cultural diversity in the Canadian context. Her dissertation title is: "Wor(l)d Politics: International Relations Theory and Identity Practices."
	Timothy Donais , B.A. (Carleton), M.A., Ph.D (York), CCHS Post-doctoral Fellow. Research Interests: Post-conflict peacebuilding; contemporary Balkan politics; the political economy of conflict. His current research focuses specifically on the political economy of the Dayton peace process in Bosnia-Herzegovina.
	Abbas H. Gnamo , B.A. (Addis Ababa), M.A., Ph.D, DEA (Paris I, Pantheon-Sorbonne), Lecturer, Ryerson Polytechnic University and University of Toronto. Research Interests: African studies; conflict management; ethno-national conflict.

	Kyle Grayson, B.A. (Queen's), M.A., Ph.D (York), Canadian Consortium on Human Security (CCHS) Post-doctoral Fellow. Research Interests: Discourses of international relations; critical social theory (particularly the work of Michel Foucault); the securitization of identity; Canadian foreign policy; biopolitics; human (in)security. Currently his research is concentrating on two projects. The first is an examination of the relationship between geopolitical identity, neoliberalism and Canadian human security policies with respect to the regulation of extra-territorial corporate conduct. The second project (still in its preliminary stages) is a genealogy of political assassination with a focus on how the practice has been understood and interpreted in dominant discourses of global politics. Doctoral dissertation title: "Chasing Dragons: Security, Identity, and Illicit Drugs in Canada."
	Tatsuo Harada, Associate Professor at the College of International Studies at Chubu University in Japan. Research Interests: Human security; political-economic theories and human development.
	H.R. Rao, B.Tech (IIT, Kanpur), MBA (Delhi), Ph.D (Purdue). Research Interests: International systems outsourcing; information security and assurance; e-commerce. Teaching areas: e-commerce; networks; information security. He is currently researching knowledge management systems, e-government, and security issues in e-government. He is a Fulbright Fellow at YCISS (Fall 2004) and a Professor of MIS and an Adjunct Professor of Computer Science at SUNY Buffalo, USA. He is co-editor in chief of Information Systems Frontiers, and an associate editor of ISR, DSS, and IEEE SMC. He has received funding from the National Science Foundation and the Canadian Consulate and is the recipient of a University (Lilly) Teaching Fellowship.
	Martin Shadwick, B.A., M.A. (York), Lecturer, Department of Political Science, Faculty of Arts. Research Interests: Canadian defence and security policy, with particular attention to defence industrial and defence management issues (alternative service delivery); the military and Canadian society; strategic studies.

Canadian Consortium on Asia Pacific Security (CANCAPS)

CANCAPS is a not-for-profit association aimed at the promotion of research, publication, and public awareness activities on Asia Pacific security issues, with a particular emphasis on Canadian involvement. CANCAPS understands “security” to be broadly defined, encompassing economic, cultural, environmental, demographic, and other issues, as well as traditional political and military concerns. “Asia Pacific” is also broadly interpreted to include Canada, the United States, Northeast Asia, Southeast Asia, South Asia, Australia, New Zealand, and the South Pacific. CANCAPS has two administrative offices, one at YCISS, York University and one at the University of British Columbia and has a membership of over 300 Canadian government employees, academics, and students.

CANCAPS’ main activities are as follows:

- publication of the CANCAPS Bulletin, a 16-page newsletter that appears four times a year. It includes articles by Canadians about Asia Pacific security developments, reports of Canadian government policy, updates on the Council for Security Cooperation in Asia Pacific (CSCAP), information about new resources (publications, conference papers, World Wide Web sites, etc.), and a list of upcoming events, all having to do with Asia Pacific security;
- publication of the CANCAPS Papers, a series of working papers on Asia Pacific security issues;
- publication of the CANCAPS Directory, a directory of Canadian specialists in Asia Pacific security issues;
- working groups; and
- an annual conference.

Centre Outreach Program - Contemporary Dilemmas in Canadian Security Lecture Series

Beginning in the autumn of 2003, YCISS is pleased to offer a public lecture series on contemporary issues in Canadian security, to be held in a variety of appropriate venues around Toronto. The series will feature two lectures a year, each exploring a current dilemma facing Canadian defence and security. The goal of the series is to raise public awareness of the issues we face, as Canadians, and to contribute to the public discussion of those issues. YCISS takes an expansive view of the nature of security in the contemporary world, and the lectures in the series will reflect that breadth. The lecturers will be drawn from York University, across Canada, and around the world to provide informative, challenging reflections on the issues of the day.

SDF-Net

SDF-Net is an initiative designed to strengthen the southern Ontario community of researchers whose interests encompass aspects of international security, Canadian foreign and defence policy, and related issues. To this end, SDF-Net seeks to bring together researchers from centres and programs supported through the Security and Defence Forum of the Department of National Defence, researchers from centres and programs that are not formally connected to the SDF program, and independent researchers, to explore the possibilities for cooperative research, teaching, and outreach activities.

Security Sector Reform in South Eastern Europe: An Inventory of Initiatives

Security Sector Reform in South Eastern Europe: An Inventory of Initiatives is a research project being carried out by YCISS on behalf of the Stability Pact for South Eastern Europe (Working Table III on Security Issues). The Norwegian Ministry of Foreign Affairs has provided funding for this project.

The main objective of this project is to encourage transparency and information-sharing in security sector reform, and to provide an accessible decision-making tool for those countries and international organizations involved in this process. It aims to encourage better and more focused approaches to security sector reform, both by providing an inventory of ongoing or recently-completed initiatives and by identifying gaps and overlaps in international engagement in the region. Ideally, these tools will facilitate the work of decision-makers in developing future initiatives that are more focused, and ultimately, more effective.

Techniques for Analysis of International Affairs and Trade Policy: A Mini-Course

¹ Please note that YCISS does not have an operating budget ("Total Budget") and that every contract, grant, and award has its own account as well as its own project-specific budget. These projects come in at various times throughout the year, making it impossible to have an overall budget. Therefore completing this template was difficult as we do not track expenses according to the categories listed above. Rather, we have been tracking overall expenses since 1998-99 according to the gross categories in the attached "Gross Expenditures 2004-2005". We have created new categories above in bold type where appropriate and have included expenses in the lines that match our categories most closely.

² Includes the following SDF activities: Afternoon Seminar Series, Distinguished Critical Thinkers in World Politics Seminar Series, Outreach - Contemporary Dilemmas in Canadian Security Studies, and the Post-Communist Studies Programme.

³ YCISS is carrying forward approximately $4,000 for the Annual Conference as we obtained a CDFAI grant that covered conference expenses and the $4,000 from SDF will be used to publish the proceedings. Also, due to the delay in the release of the International Policy Review, our Outreach public forum has been postponed from 29 March to early May 2005 and we are carrying forward $2,400 for this event.

⁴ Please note that items such as February and March telecom and March copying have not yet been processed and so are not reflected in these numbers. Also, several items such as subscription renewals for our Library have not yet come in and therefore are not included in actual disbursements.

NOTES

- ¹: The Faculty of Arts provides the following contributions to the Centre:
- Space - A suite containing a library, a meeting room, and offices for faculty, staff, and graduate students.
 - Faculty time - 2.5 course releases.
 - Secretarial Support (full-time).
 - Telephone Equipment - Secretary/Receptionist unit plus all lines for teaching faculty.

Postage.
Computing Plan Support.
Furniture - 50% of the cost of 11 new office chairs.

2. Please note that there are sometimes grants/contracts that are only administered by YCISS - the Centre does not have any other role in the project beyond financial administration and these are listed separately so as not to mislead. The only amount shown as YCISS income is that amount which is paid from these grants/contracts for YCISS administrative labour.
