

Want to earn credits in your major, finish your degree, and launch your career—all at the same time?

Ready to apply your advanced disciplinary knowledge and skills to a real world challenge?

Eager to do a team capstone project with students across York, mentored by GTA professionals?

If you answered YES to any of these questions, then C4 might be for you!

What is C4?

Cross-Campus Capstone Classroom—or C4 for short—is a new initiative that brings York students together in multi-disciplinary teams to work on year-long capstone projects pitched by non-profits, start-ups, and businesses who want to make real social impact.

What's a Capstone?

Capstones are “finishing year” experiences that consolidate what graduating students have previously learned and prepare students to succeed after graduation through hands-on experiences. They are high-impact practices that require advanced critical and creative thinking and thus set students apart in the job market.

How does C4 work?

First, we use your skills and career goals to match you with a multi-disciplinary capstone project inspired by one of our partners. Then, you will spend the course collaborating with students from other departments, being mentored by an interdisciplinary team of capstone professors and workplace experts, while earning credits toward your degree—all at the same time.

How do I sign up?

Interested students should attend our public information sessions, but be sure to pre-register through this link. Then, they should apply to participate in C4 through these links. Finally, they should register in a designated C4-linked gateway course—check out this webpage for an up-to-date list of possibilities. For more information, feel free to email the C4 Team at C4Class@yorku.ca.
