Join us for an interesting discussion of Toronto's 19th-century Black history with historians Adrienne Shadd, Afua Cooper and Karolyn Smardz Frost, authors of the classic work, The Underground Railroad, Next Stop: Toronto! Beautifully illustrated, this new and updated edition is both accessible and engaging. The first edition published in 2002 remains the only volume detailing our city's rich African Canadian heritage. It is based on extensive primary research and includes historical images, maps and copies of historical documents, as well as artifacts drawn from two major archaeological excavations, 30 years apart. This panel discussion will also offer unique insight into the painstaking research that helped illuminate the vibrant "world-within-a-world" created by freedom seekers and free African American immigrants who made Toronto their home in the tumultuous years before the American Civil War.

ADRIENNE SHADD is a consultant, curator and author originally from North Buxton, Ontario, one of the last stops on the Underground Railroad. She has been recognized with the William P. Hubbard Award for Race Relations and the J.C. Holland Award for her research and writing.

AFUA COOPER is a multidisciplinary scholar, author, and artist. Her indomitable research on slavery and Black history has made her one of the leading figures in African Canadian studies and the authority on Canadian slavery.

KAROLYN SMARDZ FROST is an archaeologist, historian, and award-winning author. She and her team at the Toronto Board of Education's Archaeological Resource Centre uncovered the first Underground Railroad site in Canada.
