

- Home
- About the CVR
- News
- Members
- Seminar Series
- Conference
- Resources
- CVR Summer School
- Research Labs
- Training at the CVR
- Partnering with the CVR
- Contact Us

- Tuesday, September 30, 2003
Cognition is categorization

All of our categories consist in ways we behave differently toward different kinds of things, whether it be the things we do or don't, eat, mate with, or flee from, or the things that we describe, through our language, as prime numbers, affordances, or absolute discriminables. That is also all that cognition is for -- and about.

Steven Harnad
Centre de Neuroscience de la Cognition, UQAM