

The Path to Becoming a Librarian

Qualifications/Schooling

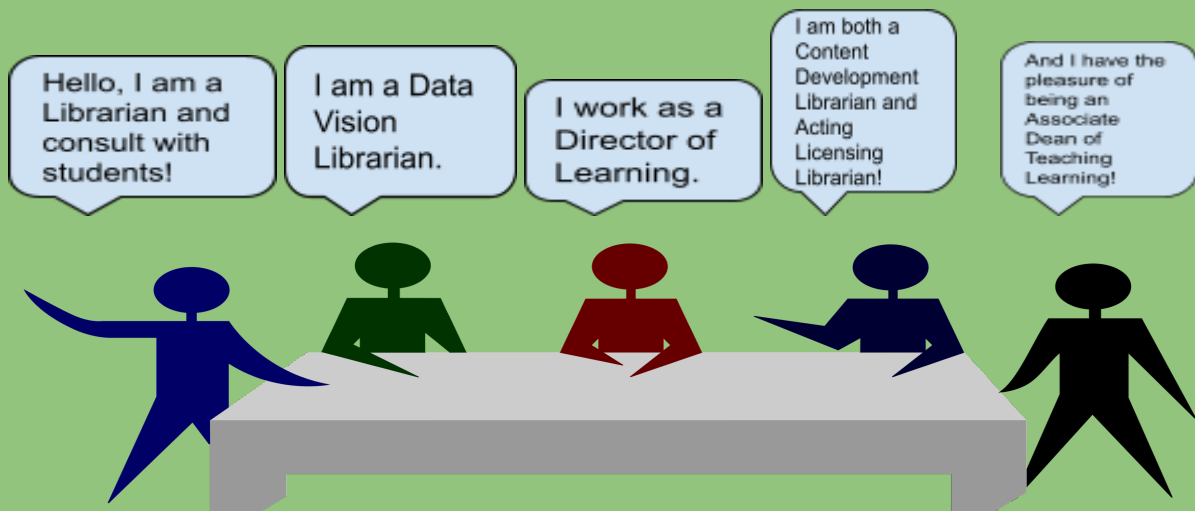

Individuals looking into this career have many different pathways to enter. They need to have their Bachelor, two Masters, as well as their Librarian Information Science degree accredited by the American Librarian Association.

Skills

Librarians need to have many important skills as they work with many different people and different resources. They need to be able to work with others and individually, being both self-motivated and able to motivate other people. Librarians need to be flexible as they create projects and workshops, working both in-person and online. They need to be responsible and be able to take leadership.

Potential Jobs

In the Future Life as a Librarian....

Being a Librarian can at times be very stressful when having to work with so many people who have different work ethics and resources/services. There are also challenges to be faced as one gets their necessary schooling and looking for a job. It can be tricky to get one's foot in the door, so make sure to gain work experience! There are so many different roles to choose from, ranging from a consultant or as an administrator.

Find your niche and work at advancing your skills!

