

INSTRUCTIONAL DESIGNER

QUALIFICATIONS

In order to become an instructional designer, these are the steps to be in this career:

- Degree in software engineering
- Strong customer service, relationship building, and conflict resolution skills
- Strong attention to detail, visual design, and time management skills

REASONS TO BE IN THE CAREER!!

- Work with senior instructional designers and subject matter experts to understand content of training from an end user perspective and identify target material requirements to target audience's training needs
- No day looks the same
- A lot of variety of work

THERE'S STILL TIME. JOIN THE CAREER

If you enjoy being part of a team and have an opportunity to build on your creative skills and art, this is the career for you!! Not only would you have a chance to work with other team members but also have a chance to work with other stakeholders in other careers.