Course Description and Objectives

This course aims at deepening the knowledge and understanding of developmental processes. It will focus on the emotional and social aspects of the mental development.

The course will examine the field of developmental psychology, as a developmental process in itself. The writings of giants - Freud, Mahler, Erikson, Gilligan and Bowlby - will enable us to evaluate this process. The personal and professional growth of the students is an aim of itself. Active involvement of students in both reading and in class discussions is of major importance.

A case study: An integrative project: The student will interview a person and strive to understand this person's development using psychological theories.

The structure of the course:

Fall semester: We will discuss a few important theories regarding emotional and social development. The last two classes will be devoted to the mandatory workshop in interviewing.

Winter semester:

1. A team lesson: Guiding the students on their integrative project
2. Presentation of the integrative project
3. Writing of the final paper, enriched by the discussions in class.

Required Reading: Course kit (first semester) will be available in the bookstore.

Course Evaluation:

A personal contribution regarding the reading (8%); Handing in a description of the interviewee on time (2%); Preparedness for the team's lesson (10%); Presentation of an integrative project (20%); Paper on the integrative project (20%); Positive contribution in class first semester (15%) second semester (15%).

Your grade for the course will be based on the following scale:

A+ 90-100; A 80-89; B+ 75-79; B 70-74; C+ 65-69; C 60-64; D+ 55-59; D 50-54;

Senate approved the following grading schemes for the Faculties of Administrative Studies, Arts, Atkinson College, Education, Fine Arts, Science and Glendon College:

- A+. 9. Exceptional Thorough knowledge of concepts and/or techniques and exceptional skill or great originality in the use of those concepts, techniques in satisfying the requirements of an assignment or course.

- C. 4. Fairly Competent Acceptable level of knowledge of concepts and/or techniques together with some skill in using them to satisfy the requirements of an assignment or course.
- D+. 3. Passing Slightly better than minimal knowledge of required concepts and/or techniques together with some ability to use them in satisfying the requirements of an assignment or course.
- D. 2. Barely Passing Minimum knowledge of concepts and/or techniques needed to satisfy the requirements of an assignment or course.
- E. 1. Marginally Failing
- F. 0. Failing.

Integrative Project: Interview and developmental insight

A main thesis in developmental psychology is that childhood influences adulthood. Our goal is to examine this thesis in real life.

Equipped with theoretical knowledge accumulated throughout years of studying psychology, students will interview a well-adjusted adult (preferably 40+) individual. This individual cannot be someone who belongs or potentially belong to the student's social or familiar circle. The student will find the candidate for the interview through a "matchmaker" who knows both the student and the candidate. Based on the interview as well as on theoretical knowledge, students will draw developmental lines connecting past with present and to check the validity of the thesis above in that specific life story.

To be eligible to perform an interview, you are required:

1. To participate in a short in-class workshop (in the last couple of weeks in the fall session).
2. To write a brief description of the interview's candidate and have it approved by the course director. This description includes: Age, occupation, and family status; How did you find that person? Add details given to you by the "matchmaker". Hand in two copies of the printed description by class #7. An approval of the candidate will be returned to you; the second copy will be filed in record.

Rarely a student may be eligible to base their paper on a published biography/ autobiography, or on a documentary/ fiction movie. In these cases the person may have a significant psychopathology. This option will require a special approval and guidance by the course director.

In every case, it will be helpful for you to focus on a specific developmental issue, which may be of particular relevance to the interviewee's life (e.g. divorce of parents, immigration, norms and values in South Korea). This issue may enrich your developmental knowledge and expose you and your listeners to further relevant knowledge. This will also allow you to demonstrate your capacity for independent research.

Teamwork on the project:

Depending on class' size, the final project (presentation and writing the paper) may be performed individually or as a joint effort of 2 or 3 students. If you work in a team, be aware that the workload should not be divided: Students will work together and will be responsible for all parts of the presentation and paper. A mandatory description of the individual contribution of each of the team members will be attached to the final paper.

A personal contribution in class based on the reading

Each student will present 5-10 minutes personal contribution to a reading. This can be an elaboration on the reading, contrasting it with another reading in psychology, personal "sense" about the reading (an interesting example), etc.

Preparedness for the team's lesson:

During the first classes in the winter term, teams will participate in a "team lesson". First, each team will decide on which of the interviews performed by the team members, to focus. For that lesson you will have to be well prepared, by mastering the theories learnt in class and demonstrating an "educated reflection" about the interview on focus. Obviously you will have to remember that interview in detail.

Presentation:

The presentation follows the same structure of the paper (see below). The difference is that the presentation is semi-formal, discussion is encouraged and the presenters may gain much from it. These insights may be incorporated in the final paper.

Criteria of presentation evaluation: Organization of time; ability to describe the subject as a real "round", multi faceted, person; correct usage of theoretical concepts; demonstrating ability to integrate wide knowledge in developmental psychology; sufficient addressing of methodological issues; ability to relate to developmental lines; critical thinking; depth; demonstration of constructive approach to relevant questions, criticism and contributions of class members.

Final Paper:

The paper will require to integrate minimum 2 theoretical perspectives learnt in class and at least one psychological or sociological issue independently studied, and to apply them to the life story of the interviewee.

The final paper will be written in accordance with the APA instructions. The recommended length of the paper is 8 double spaced pages (not including bibliography). Maximum length is 10 pages (not including bibliography). For some interviewees a longer paper is preapproved. Appendix at any length is accepted.

As a learning opportunity, student will hand in, on the last class in the fall the title page and the first page of her/his paper. The student will receive a feedback on this assignment during the “team class” in the winter.

Criteria of paper evaluation: APA style title; abstract; introduction; method (subject, procedure); results (subject’s life story and the interaction with the subject in vivo, ability to describe the subject as a real “round”, multi faceted, person); discussion (integration of facts and developmental theories; correct usage of theoretical concepts; ability to relate to developmental lines; demonstrating integration of wide knowledge in developmental psychology including methodological issues; depth); APA reference; ethical considerations. Penalties: referring to a textbook or a website. Papers are to be handed in by the due date. Students handing in the paper in a delay will be penalized (3% per day). Students presenting their work during the last two weeks of classes will be automatically granted with a seven-day extension.
