To the READER.

IT will be wholly needless to write any thing in commendation of so necessary and useful a Work; for as it received encouragement at first from many learned and judicious persons of the first Rank; so it must be owned and acknowledged by all to be of general use to all the Students and Professors of the Law. All therefore that shall be said by way of Preface or Introduction, shall be some Observations touching the following particulars: (viz.) 1. Touching the supposed Authors or Collectors of these Notes and References, (2.) Some Cautions concerning the same, and (3.) some Advertisements touching the use of them.

1. As to the Collectors of these Notes and References (except those referring to some Modern Authors) they were collected by the Care and Industry of Five or Six of the most eminent and learned Lawyers, that this last Age hath bred; and whose Worth, Learning and Abilities are yet fresh in the memory of many living: And this Book together with the Notes and References was one of the said Collectors original Books, which a Person of Honour, who was very curious in his collection had gotten into his Library, from whence the Publisher purchased the same, and hath since compared it with several other of the said Originals now in the custody of some Lawyers of Eminency and Note.

(2.) Touching the Cautions concerning these Notes and References; Let none slightly reject any of the said References, or condemn them as faulty, because they cannot at first sight find out their suitableness or resemblance to the Case to which they are referred; But let such maturely and deliberately weigh and consider the grounds and reasons of the said Cases, before they reject any of the said References: for an unsteady and hasty Judgment may reject that which a more sound and judicious Judgment will value and esteem. A solid Judgment will try and weigh particulars, that out of them it may sever for its use the good from the bad; for Knowledge lies in things, as Gold in a Mine, which must be dug out, with much Sweat and Labour.

(3.) The third thing propounded was to give some Advertisement touching the use of the References; And for explaining them and making the Work the more intelligible, I have here set down the several Books at large to which the References lead you, together with their Abbreviations.

For the better understanding the References, observe that some of the References to the Year Books and the Lord Cook's Reports, were contracted by the Collectors with as much shortness as possible, and which may probably lead the Reader into a mistake, for prevention whereof take an Example or two: As in fo. 5. pl. (1.) in the Margin here, you find 19. 22 H. 6. 59. 28. and 6. 8. 10. Co. 8. 3. 38. which are thus meant (viz.) 19 H. 6. 59. 22 H. 6. 28. 6 Co. 8. 8 Co. 3. 10 Co. 38. where you will find the Cases referred to, Et sic de cæteris. A 2d. Example you have fo. 10. b. in the References towards the lower end, where you find Co. 4. 125. a. 8. 42. b. 44. which must be thus understood (viz.) Co. 4. 125. a. Co. 8. 42. b. 44. And 3dly in some places you will find a Reference to a Fol. of my Lord Cook's Reports, without naming what part of his Reports: In that case tis always intended the first Part of his Reports. And the like to any other Author, where there are more parts than one of them. And that where you find any Reference to Crook without mentioning either Eliz. Cro. Jac. Cro. &c. or 1 Cro. 2 Cro. &c. there it is intended Kelways Reports, which were published by Crook, and so got the name of Crook's Reports. And now gentle Reader, having thus for thy help and ease through the travail of thy studies Published this Work, I hope thou wilt in gratitude pass by some little mistakes, that have escaped the Press in the References and Notes, and correct them as thou meetest them in the perusal of this Book: they are but few, considering the many thousand Notes and References here inserted, and those only the putting one Letter for another in Words of a like sound, or some Letters transversed, or misplaced, which may be easily corrected by observing the Sense. Farewel.

Ornatissimo Viro, THOMÆ BROMELEY Militi, Domino
Cancellario Angliæ; R. Farewel & J. Dyer in Domino Salutem &
Fœlicitatem plurimam exoptant.

Postquam opus hoc in lucem edere præloque committere statuissemus (honoratissime Domine) cujus potissimum tutelæ ac patrocinio commendaremus, diu multumque dubitavimus. Et quamvis supervacaneum fortasse videri possit (ratione præsertim rei ipsius habita, Authorisq; facultate perspecta) protectorem & patronum adscribere: tamen cum mors, nobis authoris vitam inviderit, multoq; hæc nostra ætas protulerit, quibus cordi est alienæ industriæ obrectare: operæ precium existimavimus huic nostræ orbitati, alterum patrem parentemq; adsciscere. Quem quidem te (vir insignissime) ut aptissimum, ita & paratissimum fore humilime obsecrare tandem statuimus. Neq; tuam dominationem enixe implorare erubescimus, qui cum pro summa authoritatē possis, pro magna etiam amicitia quæ tibi cum Authore intercessit velis, hanc non gravem at laudabilem provinciam sustinere. Quod si in tua bonitate portum & perfugium hac in re habituri simus, si sub tuo patrocinio, ut olim Ulixi sub Ajacis clipeo huic operi latere liceat, bonam in spem venimus, neminem sic frontem perfricuisse, neminem ad calumpnias naturam sic pererisse, voluntatem exercuisse, fortunam servasse, qui te approbante improbare, te defendente impugnare, te denique protegente convitiis lacerare sit ausus. Neq; solum hac tua propugnatione invidiorum impetum propelles, ipsumque codicem ab omni calumpniæ metu defendes, sed nos etiam qui tuæ dignitati multum in præsentiarum debemus, pluribus ætioribus officiorum vinculis, tibi in perpetuum devincies.

Tuæ dignitatis stuidiosissimi R. Farewel & J. Dyer.

To the Students of the Common Laws of this Realm, and especially to our Masters the Benchers and Fellow-Students of the Middle Temple, R. F. and J. D. wish encrease of Learning.

After that this Work by the last Will and Testament of Sir James Dyer Knight, late Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas our most dear and loving Uncle came to our hands, being most earnestly required by some of our loving Friends, and those of good judgment and knowledge in the Common Laws of this Realm, to grant unto them the view thereof, we regarding our Friends so requiring us, and finding our selves by many good offices and duties deeply bound unto them, could not without some touch of unkindness but satisfy their demand (which obtained) the opinion they had of the Author of this Work, together with the excellency thereof (as they said) seemed to enflame them with desire to have the same, as that the Books themselves or the Copies thereof without breach of Friendship might not be denied them: which also granted, and with better judgment and deliberation read and digested, they endeavoured to persuade us to assent to the imprinting thereof, as things in their judgment right worthy to be published. Whereunto for the space of two years after we assented not, ne purposed to yield unto at all. Yet such was the importunacy of our said Friends, as utterly disliking our long pause and contrary purpose, procured others of greater countenance, most earnestly to move us in that behalf; who with sundry weighty reasons (especially that of the common good that was like to ensue) very effectually assailed us. The due consideration we had of these men, together with their grave and learned judgments of the work (having seen and in part perused the same) wholly brought us to alter our fore-setled determination. Whereupon, we according to our best abilities and judgments took in hand to peruse some part thereof, and for the residue prayed the aid and assistance of other more exquisitely skilled; and of far better judgment than our selves to select and choose out of the whole body of the said work, such Cases and matters, as should be fitted to be published, and most necessary and profitable for the Students and Professors of the Common Laws: which done, and the Cases and Matters so selected and picked out, arising to a competent Volume, we were emboldned by printing to publish the same. Wherein, in as much as the Readers shall not find the Cases so fully argued and largely disputed, as in other Books and Reports of Law is to be seen (and as they and we also could have wished) we pray them to weigh the state of the Reporter, a man no doubt though very diligent and studious, yet by reason of his place and Office which he furnished and executed until his death, and about important causes for the most part of his time so employed, that he wanted time and leisure to polish and beautifie the said Cases with more large arguments, which he had in full purpose to have done, (had not death prevented him) and yet he hath for the most part so sufficiently Reported the same, as unto the painful and diligent Student, they will both move sufficient delight to read, and afford plentiful store of matter worthy his travail. In the pursuing whereof, we dare boldly protest, as well for the rest as for our selves, That wittingly there is not any matter overpast, which any way may tend to the depravation, slander or discredit of any persons, their estates or titles; only our care was, to set forth the matters containing substance of Law; as for collateral and by-causes, we alwaies omitted them as things impertinent to this our purpose, which we hope is performed accordingly. Now it remaineth (sithence we for our parts in this our action have preferred the general and publick good, before our own private respect) that the good acceptation and friendly thankfulness of all such as are to receive knowledge and fruit thereby, may appear such, as the late reverend Judge and painful Author thereof, may receive the guerdon worthy his exquisite and painful travail, and we, that, which for our honest minds and most friendly purpose in publishing the same we shall seem to have deserved. Thus most heartily wishing that the reading of this Work may redound to no less profit and knowledge of them that be Students therein, than was meant and intended unto us by the last and best Will of our most natural and loving Uncle, we commit you to the direction of Gods holy Spirit:
