1. Call to Order and Approval of Agenda

The meeting was called to order.

A member moved to bring the motion, currently under item 10 "Other Business," up on the agenda to item 5 and move the current item 5 down to item 10.

It was moved, seconded, and carried to approve the amended agenda.

2. Chair's Remarks

The Chair called upon Anne Stebbins to read the Indigenous Acknowledgement.

The Chair announced that this was a regular meeting of Faculty Council that had been postponed. He noted that we have a number of important curricular items to discuss.

3. Minutes of the February 8, 2018 Council

It was moved, seconded, and carried to approve the circulated minutes of the February 8, 2018 meeting.

4. Business Arising from the Minutes

There was none.

5. Motion:

A member put forward the following motion:

Be it resolved that The Faculty of Liberal Arts and Professional Studies take the decision to call upon Senate to suspend all classes within LAPS for the duration of the CUPE 3903 Strike.

The motion was moved and seconded.

A member spoke in favour of the motion and stated that the policy of individual choice by Faculty members to teach or not had created mass confusion on campus.

Point of Order: A member noted that the cheering and applause was making certain people uncomfortable.

The Chair reminded the room to be considerate and avoid excessive noise. The Chair also noted that recording Council sessions or reporting on them using social media or any other means whatsoever is strictly forbidden as per Senate Policy.

A member spoke against the motion and stated that the autonomy of departments and individual faculty members to make decisions about their courses should be upheld.

A member said that the School of Administrative Studies had all but one class continuing to run during the strike and that many classes were taught by CUPE exempt contract faculty and had close to usual attendance rates. Students had expressed a wish to continue studying, particularly international students and students in their final year of study.

A member spoke in favour of the motion but recommended removing concerns of safety from the motion rationale.

A member spoke against the motion and said that if academic integrity were the only criteria, then each faculty member has the right to decide on that basis.

A member spoke against the motion and said that she had been through two strikes during her studies at York and asked that people respect the wishes of graduating students who wanted to continue studying.

A member spoke in favour of the motion and noted that students with disabilities require clarity.

A member spoke in favour of the motion and noted that safety is a top concern because cars are driving into the picket lines.

A member proposed a friendly amendment:

Be it resolved that The Faculty of Liberal Arts and Professional Studies take the decision to call upon Senate to suspend all classes within LAPS for the duration of the CUPE 3903 Strike without delay.

The amendment was moved, seconded, and passed.

The amended motion was passed.

6. Dean's Report to Council

The Dean said that she was trying to consider the issues from the vantage of different types of students including: CUPE 1, CUPE 2 (former students) as well as current undergraduate and graduate students. She called upon faculty to accommodate students with disabilities. She said that there were 1386 undergraduate lectures. Of these, 826 are suspended and 560 active. She noted that when Faculty members write in to cancel classes based on academic integrity, she asks them if they have heard from their students. The Dean said that she couldn't accept a decision based on a departmental declaration to suspend all classes. The decision had to be from an individual faculty member and based on the academic integrity of the course.

7. Question Period

A member noted that the motion was passed but asked what would happen next.

The Chair said that the motion would be conveyed to Senate Executive.

A member asked what would happen to the repository of courses that was up now for students. Would it have a use later?

The Dean said that it was just for information for students for now.

A member said that she had not submitted a form to cancel her class but she had cancelled it. She stated that it was inappropriate for the administration to interfere with faculty members' decisions to continue teaching their classes or not.

A member said that the Department of Equity Studies decided collectively to cancel classes and submitted this along with individual faculty members' reasons for cancelling but these classes were listed as active.

The Dean responded that there was a process set up because she had to report this information to students and faculty, although she tried to accommodate as many variations as she could. She invited the member to inquire with her directly for more details on her specific situation.

8. Reports of the Standing Committees of Council

The Chair called upon the Vice-Chair to present the Executive Committee report.

R. Iannacito-Provenzano noted that nominations for service on committees were open and encouraged faculty to nominate themselves and others.

Subject: Tracking Success through Indicators – Report of Working Group on Research Metrics, Committee on Research Policy & Planning

BACKGROUND

This report is submitted to the Executive Committee of the Faculty Council of Liberal Arts & Professional Studies (LA&PS) by its Committee on Research Policy & Planning (CRPP). It is part of a university-wide consultation about performance indicators related to scholarly, research and creative activities, initiated in 2017 by Senate's Academic Policy, Planning and Research Committee (APPRC). The APPRC was specifically interested in identifying those activities not normally covered by the methods of comparable metrics used by Ontario universities. In April 2017, the Executive Committee recommended that CRPP create a Working Group to explore research metrics appropriate to the social sciences and humanities. The CRPP subsequently decided that the best manner to respond to the Executive's request was to constitute itself as the Working Group on Research Metrics (WG); it elected one of its members, Prof. Markus Reisenleitner, as chair of the WG.

In order to provide a basis for discussion and eventual recommendations, the WG decided to review the Faculty's existing quality assurance documents. It gathered from the Departments and Schools of LA&PS the respective Unit Level Criteria for Graduate Program Appointment, the Research Release Program, and Tenure and Promotion. Prof. Reisenleitner extracted from these documents the criteria that are explicitly mentioned in connection with professional contribution and standing/research. The criteria are gathered in the "List of Research Indicators Explicitly Mentioned in LA & PS QA documents" (henceforth, List of Research Indicators; attached here as Appendix A). The compiled data provided the committee with a valuable representation of the wide spectrum of possibilities and challenges that need to be considered when attempting to develop fair indicators of research output at York. It also provided the foundation for the WG's deliberations and for its recommendations.

SUMMARY OF THE WG'S FINDINGS AND CONCERNS

The following items summarize the committee's observations from the compilation of Quality Assurance (QA) documents:

1. The List of Research Indicators was drawn from the criteria explicitly mentioned in the unit documents. The committee noted that in those documents, quantification of individual criteria is very rare and almost always qualified, usually with a paragraph of disclaimers regarding those numbers. The indicators are rarely units to be weighted numerically, but criteria assessed and evaluated by qualitative peer review. In a number of documents, criteria are not specific but only state general principles.
2. Since nomenclature and categories vary across units, there is a degree of fluidity that applies to the individual criteria. For example, unit documents at times refer to refereed publications in general, in which case it was assumed that books would be included.
3. Many documents contain language that allows for a broad interpretation of the criteria or specifically mention that the criteria listed are to be understood as examples, and that assessment is not limited to those criteria.
4. None of the documents indicates the explicit ranking of journals. When QA documents mention top-tier journals, these are not named.
5. Very few of the T & P documents include actual quantification of research output across different criteria.
6. In all of the evaluative processes, peer review is the basis for assessment.

The WG's discussion of the implications of the information gathered clustered around the following set of observations and considerations:

1. What emerges from the CRPP's review of the unit documents is the diversity, richness, and complexity of the scholarship carried out by the faculty in LA&PS, as well as the sophistication and thoughtfulness of the QA processes developed by the units to assess scholarly performance. In all units, QA is taken very seriously. Across LA & PS units, a complex, well-conceived and balanced QA system is already in place that takes into account the varieties and subtleties of scholarly research in a multi- and interdisciplinary university.
2. There is, at first glance, quite a bit of overlap among the indicators employed by different units. For example, among the most prevalent criteria are authored books and refereed articles; the absence of citation rankings as criteria for QA is also common. However, there is also significant variation, both among different departments and among the three categories of documents within the same department. Furthermore, the quality criteria are clearly specific to individual disciplines and the specific contexts of a QA exercise. Given such substantial and significant variation in the indicators used between units, the WG cautions against the use of this set of indicators as the basis for a faculty-wide standardized system or as a template for quantitative methods. Any evaluation involving these indicators must be qualitative, context-specific, and peer-based. The WG is confident that disciplinary expertise is the best measure of evaluative criteria. Many aspects of research and scholarship are difficult or impossible to quantify. The qualitative dimension to assessing scholarship cannot be excluded, nor should it. It is not simply a matter of expanding and refining metrics.

3. The compilation of criteria lends considerable support to the concerns expressed by the academic community at York about the limitations of conventional research metrics. Many of the forty-six “criteria” are not tracked by the standard proprietary databases, e.g., textbooks, research reports, creative work, community outreach, external and internal funding, journal editorships. Traditional methods and commercial databases do not reflect the full extent of research activity in LA&PS.

4. A possible solution to the problem of tracking categories currently excluded by proprietary databases, and a means of capturing outputs that they miss, is for York to develop its own framework of scholarly activities that constitute research. An open access repository such as YorkSpace is a venue where faculty members can choose to deposit their scholarly work. This project can be extended or supplemented by complementary venues. WG suggests, however, that a collaborative project involving other Ontario universities would be an even more efficient means of taking public “ownership” of research indicators.

5. The question of research impact presents particular challenges. The use of indicators that demonstrate impact and knowledge mobilization varies significantly within LA&PS. External funding is mentioned in 38 of the unit-level QA documents, but the category of ‘news magazines/newspapers/interviews’ yields only 17 results, ‘policy papers/submissions’ 10, and ‘citation rankings’ a mere 5. The last example would seem to indicate that a metric fundamental to the sciences has not been — or cannot be — adopted by many of the academic disciplines represented in LA&PS. Even excluding this last case, it is clear that the knowledge mobilization efforts in the Faculty are not captured in its QA documents.

6. The development of “Incomparable Metrics” needs to consider the conditions within which scholars operate, conditions that vary between institutions, faculties and departments. These include institutional support (infrastructure, funding) as well as institutional obligations tied but external to research (teaching load, class sizes, service requirements). Any credible method of assessing research output, and particularly a comparative one, must take into account the particular context of that research.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The range and diversity of research activities in LA&PS can be fully and fairly assessed only through collegial, peer evaluation. Qualitative judgement should be the primary criterion in any evaluative framework. It is essential that faculty members actively involved in research and scholarship hold the primary role in the development and formulation of any system that assesses scholarly outcomes, as well as in its application and management. The faculty members involved should reflect the range of disciplines and programs in LA&PS, and they should have priority over any external stakeholders.

2. Quantitative metrics alone are not a valid measure of research excellence, and should not be used singularly or primarily as a basis for research evaluation
3. In order to capture the full spectrum of activity in LA&PS, the “Incomparable Metrics” framework should include the List of forty-six indicators extracted from existing documents (Appendix A).

Meeting Synopsis

The 644th Meeting of Senate held on Thursday, April 12, 2018

Remarks

The Chair of Senate, Professor Lesley Beagrie, welcomed Senators and members of the community attending the special meeting. She paid respects to Mark Cross, a victim of the Humboldt Broncos tragedy and former York Lions hockey player.

Motions Approved

Senate approved a motion from the Executive Committee calling on faculty members and administrators to

- 1) take a flexible, reasonable approach to balancing the pillars of the Disruptions Policy – academic integrity with fairness to students,
- 2) maintain open communication with students and respond in a timely way to inquiries from students, and
- 3) be responsive to unique needs of students, with special emphasis on those for whom real time limits are being internally or externally imposed, making continued participation in the course impossible or significantly disadvantageous to students, including those poised to graduate this spring.

Also approved was a hortative motion expressing the view that

Senate urges both sides in the labour disruption to immediately return to the bargaining table and take the necessary steps to settle the dispute as soon as possible
