

We investigated how carbohydrate ingestion enhances fatigue resistance in the neuromuscular system during single leg knee extension exercise mimicking prolonged endurance exercise. We showed carbohydrate intake extends fatigue resistance by increasing fuel availability to the brain and muscles by increasing interstitial glucose concentration as measured by continuous glucose monitors.