

PROBLÉMATIQUE
JOURNAL OF POLITICAL STUDIES
REVUE D'ÉTUDES POLITIQUES
AN ANNUAL PUBLICATION OF THE YORK
GRADUATE POLITICAL SCIENCE STUDENTS' ASSOCIATION

EDITORIAL COLLECTIVE:

Murray Cooke
 Kim Rygiel
 Susan Spronk

CRITICAL READERS:

Julian Ammirante	Julie Dowsett	Marie-Josée Massicotte
Cenk Aygul	Bradley Fidler	Shokoufeh Sakhi
Elaine Brown	Gigi Herbert	Markus Sharaput
Étienne Cantin	Sabine Hikel	Chuck Smith
Tim Clark	Ali Howell

SUBMISSIONS FOR VOLUME IX:

Problématique is a journal of politics, culture and society. Three hard copies and an electronic version of papers should be submitted to the below mailing address by June 20, 2003. Submissions should be in either English or French and should not exceed 8000 words. Reviews should not exceed 2000 words. Papers should be free of sexist, racist, homophobic and other forms of oppressive language.

Contributions do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the editorial collective or others associated with the journal.

Full instructions for authors are available at the Problématique website: www.gpssa.org

MAILING ADDRESS:

Problématique, c/o Department of Political Science
 York University
 4700 Keele Street
 Toronto, ON, M3J 1P3

EMAIL ADDRESS:

problema@yorku.ca

Copyright © 2002 by Problématique
 ISSN No. 1181-7488

Cover photos by Kim Rygiel

Cover design by Kent Rygiel

Number 8	Fall 2002	Contents
Editors' Notes		2
Tuna Baskoy:	Karl Marx's Theory of Market Competition	4
Jessica Cameron:	Non/Knowledge of Categorized Identity	24
Sirvan Karimi:	Economic Restructuring, Class Reconfiguration and the Canadian State	35
Geoff Kennedy:	State, Civil Society and Social Context in Hegel's Philosophy of Right	56
Alex Latta:	Consumption as Politics in the Biotech Era: The Limits of Consumer Sovereignty	78
Book Reviews
Étienne Cantin:	Isaac Joshua, La crise de 1929 et l'émergence américaine	96
Murray Cooke:	Ed Broadbent (ed.), Democratic Equality: What Went Wrong?	100
Paula Hevia:	Fernando Coronil, The Magical State	104
Susan Spronk:	Ben Fine, Social Capital versus Social Theory	108
Notes on Contributors		112

Editors' Notes

Problématique is a journal organized and operated by graduate students in the Political Science Department of York University. It provides a venue for what we consider to be crucial aspects of scholarly development – peer feedback, criticism and the sharing of ideas. Graduate students carry out all vetting and decision making according to standard academic practices.

The articles in this year's volume reflect the diversity of research interests found in our graduate programme.

Tuna Baskoy insists upon the relevance of a Marxist interpretation of competition for understanding economic globalization and the ascending influence of finance capital. In doing so, he argues that the insights of Marx have often been misunderstood or misrepresented by Marxists and non-Marxists alike.

Jessica Cameron explores tensions within feminist theorizing between feminists, who argue for retaining 'women' as the subject of feminist politics, and others, like Judith Butler, who argue that feminist politics must begin by deconstructing all identity categories including that of women. Cameron shows how these two seemingly contradictory positions actually work in tandem to reproduce discourses of inequality.

Sirvan Karimi analyzes the impact of economic restructuring and the shifting basis of class relations upon the relative autonomy of the Canadian state. Using a Poulantzian framework, he addresses the changing, though not diminishing, role of the state in the accumulation process.

Geoff Kennedy argues that the absence of the working class in Hegel's theory of the modern state can only be explained by placing Hegel in his historical context. Although influenced by the insights of English political economists, Hegel was describing the class formation characteristic of pre-capitalist Prussia.

Alex Latta exposes the limits of the political strategies employed by the anti-GE food lobby. He argues that this consumers' movement is inspired by a Hobbesian concept of sovereignty, which severely narrows the scope of political action. Alex suggests that a concept of sovereignty inspired by Aristotelian theorists such as Hannah Arendt will allow us to ask difficult questions involved in the fight against GE foods, such as public control over technology.

This volume could not have come into existence without the help of many people. We are indebted to our critical readers for all the work they put into providing feedback on this year's papers. Thanks to Markus Sharaput for his efforts while a member of the editorial collective, Travis Fast, the Graduate Political Science Student Association Liaison, for his assistance and ideas and to Kelly Reimer for his help in formatting the papers. We are grateful to the Faculty of Graduate Studies, the Graduate Programme of Political Science and the Academic Initiatives Committee of the Political Science Department for their generous financial support.

Belated thanks goes to Mahindan Kanakaratnam and Govind Rao whose cartoons were featured in the previous volume of Problématique.

The success of this journal depends upon the active participation of graduate students. We encourage all York Political Science graduate students to consider submitting papers or reviews or serving as critical readers or editors.

The Editorial Collective