Winter 2023

YORK

A Message From the Academic Director

Dear Research Commons Community,

The start of the Winter semester is a great time to begin setting intentions for the upcoming year. Maybe you're interested in applying for a new award or grant, or maybe you want to learn more about research opportunities and supports at York. We hope one or more of our Winter term workshops can help you with your research goals.

While looking through the Research Commons Workshop Booklet for the 2023 Winter Semester you may notice that we are offering fewer workshops than usual this semester. As the three-year pilot phase of Research Commons comes to an end, a greater portion of our time in 2023 will be spent on reviewing, revisioning and restructuring our programs for the future. If there is a workshop you were looking forward to attending and we are not offering it at this time, please know that there will be more coming in the next academic year. And let us know what you're missing and hoping we bring back. We'd love to hear from you.

Workshops such as our Tri-council operating grant information sessions will now be held in May, with mock reviews for specific funding programs to follow in June. The dates of these workshops, and additional workshops hosted by us will be sent out via the listserv in Spring 2023.

After spending the last few months hearing about the research needs from across York's campuses, we are excited to envision and further develop integrated and comprehensive programs that support career advancement, facilitate creativity and collaboration, and elevate research impact.

We thank you for understanding, and we look forward to seeing you at our workshops this semester.

Best regards,
Luann

Why Apply for External Funding?

March 30, 2023
from 10:30 am – 12:00 pm

Have you wondered why you would put in the work to apply for an external grant when you can do the research you want without money? Do you feel pressure to “commodify” your program of research and your CV? Perhaps common metrics for success that simply count outputs, such as publications and research dollars, seem to you to one more expression of the ever-present colonial capitalist agenda that reproduces the corporate university, promoting competition and undermining collaboration. We invite you to engage with us in an open and critical conversation that takes seriously these commitments, and explores the opportunities, dilemmas, and pitfalls of pursuing external funding.
