

AGING IN THE CITY

The Pandemic in long-term care: Making the story public

The “Aging in the City” series examines key issues for aging equity, including quality care and work in long-term care; the social determinants of health and aging; and thinking through issues related to aging, diversity and difference.

About COVID in the House of Old: In 2021 York University’s Professor Megan Davies created a public exhibit about what happened in long-term care homes when the pandemic hit. Listen to her talk about this unique story telling project and about being an academic who mixes research, art and politics.

September 22, 2023 | 12-1pm

Online via ZOOM

All are welcome!

registration is required

RSVP: Click here to register

SPEAKER

Megan Davies is professor emerita in the Faculty of Liberal Arts & Professional Studies at York University. She is a health historian with interests in old age, madness, and community projects.

yu_care@yorku.ca

yucare.info.yorku.ca

Twitter: @YorkuCare